Vignettes Assignment

Emotions are unique since they can show how we feel in different situations. As well, emotions connect with my language and literacy. For example, when a presentation in front of a classroom happens. I must prepare myself from all the different emotions and those stares a hundred percent I would feel. I believe being nervous before presenting is never going to differ.

Moment

[When I had to present about a social impact, I chose how parent's decisions affect children. Well, I had to research and learn current information of which I had never heard. I saw numbers known as data; it showed me percentages of how kids do not have a successful future because certain decisions parents have. This event stands out to me because it increases my knowledge about what is happening in my surroundings. It also helps to expand my vocabulary and the way things are on the outside. It improves my skills to inform my peers about the impact children are having. Aside from this, I love it when I finish presenting because it gives me a sort of satisfaction from not being in front of the class but also from delivering valuable information. To put yourself out there gives you courage.

Another learning experience is when I read. I feel different feelings when I read, I have end up crying and laughing. I love to read romance fiction books and non-fiction books. I think reading has helped me to learn about other cultures, how other families are with each other, and how others go through diversity. I have read the book "A Long Walk to Water" by Linda Sue Park. I bring me knowledge to visualize how diversity can be bad. This book is about surviving. Most of the time, we think we are going through a tuff time. However, if we really go in depth about different problems the world has, our problems will be diminished. This has made see things from a different point of view. I can accomplish any goal I have since because while others are in inconvenient situations, I have the gracious opportunity and take advantage of the resources that I have.

Lesson

Patience was a trait I did not have; I would always try to avoid explaining or hearing others because my lack of listening and patience. However, during high school having my friends helped me. Sometimes I have been overwhelmed and when my friends come to tell me about their problem, I have given out attitude. Once, my friends had a problem where they wouldn't talk to each other and instead of helping them or advising them, I decided to ignore the problem. Until it reached a point where the group was being separated. I learn to have communication and have patience because we might not know what others are through. Even though I have struggled I have gotten to a place where I have more patience, and I feel more comfortable. Learning to be patient has added and fortalice some of my skills. Such as listening and being able to advise my friends or other with the knowledge I have obtain with my experiences. This moment has benefited me in such a positive way and has made me help others.
